CELEBRATING 100 YEARS OF UNIVERSITY OF LUCKNOW

ABOUT THE INSTITUTE

Established in the year 1864 as Canning College, the University of Lucknow was given the status of University on 24th November, 1920. Within years the institute has risen to become one of the pioneer educational centers of India. Spread across 220 acres, this lush green campus has given us one of the finest men who have proved their mettle in their respective fields. We are celebrating 100 years of our grand university and it is being highly celebrated by many events in every faculty from 11th to 21st November, 2020. This centennial year, we pledge to strive harder so as to maintain this glory and live to the esteem of this institution.

ABOUT THE EVENT

An arbitration is a private method of dispute resolution where the parties have agreed that their dispute will be heard and decided upon by an arbitrator and not a judge in a court of law. Arbitration is often referred to as “alternative dispute resolution” i.e. an alternative to approaching a court. The multiplying of outstanding cases in the courts, exorbitant delays in the administration of justice and expenses of litigation have continued to plague people thereby undermining their faith in the justice system. The issue at hand is to examine and choose a right formal legal system, such as Alternative Dispute Resolution procedures.

The historical evolution of Arbitration in India can be traced back to “Brihadaranyaka Upanishad” under the Hindu Law. It provided for various types of arbitral bodies consisting of three primary bodies namely: The local courts, the people engaged in the same business or profession and Panchayats. In ancient times, people often voluntarily submitted their disputes to Panchayats for a binding resolution. Sandra Day O’Connor, the Hon’ble Retired Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States of America has appositely said that the courts should not be the places where resolution of dispute begins rather they should be places where the disputes end after alternative methods of resolving disputes have been meticulously considered and tried.

International arbitration is often referred to as the area of globalization “par excellence” Indeed, it is the preferred means of dispute resolution for multinational companies. It brings together parties, counsel and arbitrators from diverse legal backgrounds, and these various legal influences make international arbitration a “live” example of the globalization of law.

Over the past 10 years, international arbitration has experienced spectacular growth in both commercial and investor-state arbitration. Trade is occurring more and more rapidly, and from one part of the world to the other. This entails a cultural mix of different arbitrators, parties, lawyers and legal systems. An arbitration system capable of adapting to different situations, taking advantage of its flexibility and able to answer the demands of a global world. In summary, international arbitration should: (i) be able to solve any dispute in a rigorous manner; (ii) be reasonably fast; (iii) be cost efficient; and (iv) be easily enforceable in any part of the world.

This workshop provides with a wonderful opportunity to all the budding lawyers to sharpen their acumen in the field of arbitration. It is an opportunity for training and creating awareness on the concept of arbitration.
